Cumulative Table of Cases Connecticut Reports Volume 328

(Replaces Prior Cumulative Table)

Cuozzo V. Orange (Order) 900 Griswold v. Camputaro (Order) 900 In re Jacob W. (Order) 900 In re Jacob	Bozelko v. Statewide Construction, Inc. (Order)	907 901 907 134
Griswold v. Camputaro (Order)		906
In re Damian G. (Order) In re Jacob W. (Order) 1902 1908 v. State Petition for new trial based on newly discovered DNA evidence; whether new evidence satisfied fourth element for granting petition for new trial under Asherman v. State (202 Conn. 429) because it would probably produce different result in new trial; certification from Appellate Court; claim that Appellate Court should have engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute ($ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act. Unemployment compensation; whether members of plaintiff's sales force who engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorr	Griswold v Camputaro (Order)
In re Jacob W. (Order) Jones v. State
Petition for new trial based on newly discovered DNA evidence; whether new evidence satisfied fourth element for granting petition for new trial under Asherman v. State (202 Conn. 429) because it would probably produce different result in new trial; certification from Appellate Court; claim that Appellate Court should have engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act Unemployment compensation; whether members of plaintiff's sales force who engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff siled to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in $31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted $31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (II) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff semployees; wheth		902 satisfied fourth element for granting petition for new trial under Asherman v. State (202 Conn. 429) because it would probably produce different result in new trial; certification from Appellate Court; claim that Appellate Court should have engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act		84
State (202 Conn. 429) because it would probably produce different result in new trial; certification from Appellate Court; claim that Appellate Court should have engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act. Unemployment compensation; whether members of plaintiff's sales force who engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff fuiled to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (II), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of	Petition for new trial based on newly discovered DNA evidence; whether new evidence trial, certification from Appellate Court; claim that Appellate Court should have engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act	satisfied fourth element for granting petition for new trial under Asherman v.
engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion standard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for new trial did not preside at petitioner's criminal trial and parties agreed that new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act new jury would credit new DNA evidence; claim that statute (§ 52-270) that authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act	engaged in de novo review of whether new evidence was likely to produce different result; whether traditional considerations for applying abuse of discretion stan- dard of review were implicated in present case when judge deciding petition for authorizes petitions for new trial limited appellate court's review to determining whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act whether trial court had abused its discretion; whether new evidence proved that it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act it was less likely that petitioner had touched jacket that witness purportedly saw him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act him discard after shooting; whether lack of DNA match between petitioner and hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act hairs found in victim's car would lead to different result at new trial. Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act. Unemployment compensation; whether members of plaintiff's sales force who engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I, (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven Negligent supervision; claim, pursuant to statute (§ 52-557n), that defendant city Kirby of Norwich v. Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act
Unemployment compensation; whether members of plaintiff's sales force who engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven		38 engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven	, 10	0.0
or independent contractors under Unemployment Compensation Act (§ 31-222 et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven	engaged in door-to-door sales of plaintiff's products were employees of plaintiff et seq.); whether trial court correctly determined that plaintiff failed to establish that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven Negligent supervision; claim, pursuant to statute (§ 52-557n), that defendant city trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven service performed for plaintiff, as required by part C of ABC test, as set forth in § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review, failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven	that sales representatives were customarily engaged in independently established § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven whether services performed by individual constitute employment; claim that trial court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiffs employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven court interpreted § 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (III) too narrowly and incorrectly concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven	§ 31-222 (a) (1) (B) (ii) (I), (II) and (III), which governs determination of concluded that sales representatives were plaintiff's employees; whether trial court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven Negligent supervision; claim, pursuant to statute (§ 52-557n), that defendant city court properly dismissed appeals from decisions of defendant Employment Security Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven rity Board of Review; failure of plaintiff to present evidence of factors that court may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven may consider under totality of circumstances test for evaluating dynamics of relationship between putative employee and employer; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven relationship between putative employee and employee; claim that this court should reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven reconsider and overrule prior case law holding that part C of ABC test is satisfied only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven only if putative employee is actually engaged in independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven occupation, profession or business of same nature as that involved in service performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven performed for putative employer. Martinez v. New Haven Negligent supervision; claim, pursuant to statute (§ 52-557n), that defendant city and defendant board of education were negligent in failing to properly supervise students in auditorium; whether trial court improperly determined that plaintiff identifiable persons exception to governmental immunity; whether plaintiff failed to satisfy imminent harm prong of that exception because he failed to prove that it was apparent to defendants that claimed dangerous condition, namely, students running with safety scissors, was so likely to cause harm that clear and unequivocal duty to act immediately was created; claim that defendants failed to plead governmental immunity as special defense in operative answer; whether trial court, which never expressly ruled on defendants' request to amend their answer to include governmental immunity as special defense, implicitly granted request to amend answer and overruled objection thereto.
]

Meletrich v. Commissioner of Correction (Order)	908
O'Brien v. New Haven (Orders)	909
Ridgaway v. Mount Vernon Fire Ins. Co	60
Insurance; action to recover damages for defendant's refusal to provide coverage under insurance policy it issued to its insured, which had assigned its rights in policy to plaintiffs as part of settlement agreement in related action; motion for nonsuit based on plaintiffs' failure to comply with discovery order; motion to open judgment of nonsuit; certification from Appellate Court; whether Appellate Court incorrectly determined that trial court had abused its discretion in rendering judgment of nonsuit for counsel's failure to comply with order of court; claim that Appellate Court improperly applied proportionality test that applies only to sanctions for violations of discovery orders; whether judgment of nonsuit was proportionate sanction in light of entirety of factual findings; remand for trial court to conduct hearing on sanctions.
Rockwell v. Rockwell (Order)	902
Spencer v. Spencer (Order)	903
State v. Azevedo (Order)	908
State v . Johnson (Order)	905
State v. Josephs	21
Cruelty to animals; claim that statute (§ 53-247 [a]) prohibiting person from unjustifiably injuring animal requires proof that defendant had specific intent to injure animal; whether trial court properly concluded that § 53-247 (a) required only general intent to engage in conduct in question; claim that § 53-247 (a) was unconstitutionally vaque as applied to defendant's conduct; whether defendant's conduct clearly came within unmistakable core of conduct prohibited under § 53-247 (a); whether evidence was sufficient to convict defendant pursuant to § 53-247 (a).
State v. Neary (Order)	901
State v. Smith (Order)	906
State v. Stanley (Order)	907
U.S. Bank National Assn., Trustee v. Blowers (Order)	904
Wiederman v. Halnert (Order)	906